121A American Art From Revolution to Civil War: 1700-1860
Robertson
The course takes a holistic approach to the ways in which Europeans first understood the American environment on the East Coast—how and what they built, what things they made, how they saw themselves. Out of this visual culture comes the foundation of the United States. Many of the traits we think of as quintessentially American today—individualism, entrepreneurship, environmentalism, racism—are formed and developed in the years just before and after the Revolution. We will look at silver and furniture, homes and statehouses, portraits and landscapes. It is through these visual products that the first citizens of the United States explored the West, came to terms with slavery, understood the place of women, glorified the landscape, and worried about their place in the world. We still do.

252B Seminar: Questions of Cultural Patrimony: Whose Past is It?
Yegül

Prerequisite: graduate standing or senior art history majors with consent of instructor.
Recent debates on museums, archaeology and the ownership of cultural heritages underline the political and historical significance of questions concerning cultural patrimonies and the ownership of the past. Focusing on the late Ottoman attempts to define its identity through its mixed and multi-cultural past (but not limited to that geographical and chronological period), we will look into the broader questions and contemporary efforts of forging a national identity through the creation of a real or fictional image based on multi-ethnic and multi-cultural pluralisms. We will attempt to see the efforts of western powers over emerging nations in controlling, and sometimes co-opting, their cultural patrimonies—as well as stocking their national museums with objects that can defined as “looting” or “saving” depending on which side of the debate you stand—following worrisome neo-colonial attitudes. While anchored to the critical events of the last one-hundred years or so, we will consider contemporary and relevant developments in global ownership of the past and its artifacts, most recently (and some might say chillingly) articulated by our leading museums. In many ways this will be a “pro-seminar”, preparing the participant in the issues and bibliography on this subject and paving the way for the larger concerns subsumed under this broad topic. Readings will range from real “archival material” (supplied by me) to current articles in the New York Times. A paper may or may not be required. Your input from your wider fields of specialization and studies will be useful and appreciated.

Peterson

Prerequisite: graduate standing.
This seminar will examine the visual construction of alterity as an integral part of formulating and protecting cultural identity not only among Precolumbian cultures, such as the Aztec and Inka, but also by the European colonizers. The conquest of the Americas both reinforced and contradicted European preconceptions of otherness. We will explore issues of ethnicity, race, color, gender and cultural difference using examples of both indigenous self-representations as well as work by mestizo and European artists, using a postcolonial theoretical framework. A field trip is planned to LACMA in Los Angeles for the spectacular, "The Arts in Latin America, 1492-1820."

294 Seminar in Museum Practices
Robertson

Prerequisite: graduate standing
May be repeated for credit.
This seminar will be team-taught by Kathryn Kanjo, Director of the University Art Museum, and Professor Bruce Robertson.

In 2009, the University Art Museum will celebrate its 50th anniversary. This seminar is designed to help the UAM formulate its plans and its identity in the run-up to that event. We will be examining the exhibition history and the collections closely, in order to arrive at some definitions of the UAM’s history, its intellectual and aesthetic strengths.

This work will be framed within the current spate of museum building, rebranding, and change that seems to have reached a high point in the art museum world today. We will examine other case studies, and look critically at such phenomena as mission statements, exhibition programs, public outreach and so on.

Some of the outcomes of the seminar may include a redeveloped website for the UAM, collection highlights exhibitions, and so on.

186RS Seminar in Chinese Art "The Real and the Imagined in Song Dynasty China"
Sturman

Prerequisite: upper-division standing. This seminar examines the themes of realism and imagination as they were employed in three different spheres of artistic practice during the first half of the Song dynasty (960-1127 CE): professional artists active early in the dynasty, scholar-official painters active towards the end of the 11th century, and the court of Emperor Huizong (r. 1100-1125). Religious sculpture (The Sage Mother Hall of the Jin Shrine), monumental landscape painting, and paintings of nature-among the finest in the history of Chinese art-will serve as objects of study as we examine how mimesis was employed (or negated) as a visual strategy in and outside the court. 6DS  Survey: History of Art in China  Sturman

The History of Art in China is a survey course that introduces the major traditions and monuments of Chinese art from Neolithic times to the modern (20th-21st centuries). The course generally follows a chronological trajectory but with a thematic matrix. The first part of the course, from Neolithic to Han (ca. 5000 BC - AD 220) concerns the formation of culture and civilization and covers early pottery and bronze traditions as well as the beginnings of pictorial art. Objects and pictures are placed into their historical, philosophical, and social contexts. The second part of the course focuses on the importation and development of Buddhist art, from ca. AD 200 - 1000. The third part of the course interweaves the painting, calligraphy, and ceramic traditions of imperial China, from the Song dynasty to the near contemporary. Garden design and imperial architecture are also introduced. One of the aspects of the course that will be emphasized is regional diversity and intercultural encounters (India and Central Asia in particular). The title, History of Art in China, as opposed to something like The Arts of China, is intended to convey awareness of the fact art is a conceptual and subjective term and that objects have histories that extend beyond national borders. 105L  Art and Society in Late-Medieval Tuscany
Williams

Prerequisite: not open to freshmen.

The dramatic developments in central-Italian art from the eleventh to the fourteenth centuries are presented against a historical background: emergent capitalism, the gradual replacement of feudal authority with representative governments, popular religious movements and the first stirrings of humanism.

119B  Contemporary Art
Turel

Prerequisite: not open to freshmen.
An advanced introduction to the visual art of the period 1960-present. Works by prominent artists are presented in their historical contexts, and considered in relation to concepts such as post-studio art, postmodernism, feminist art, and new media. Particular attention is given to the many intersections of visual art practices with contemporary thought (critical theory) and the role art has played in the radical socio-political changes of the past five decades.

White

Prerequisite: not open to freshmen.

Few nations experienced a change in the land as drastic and complete as the United States has experienced in the past two centuries. This course is a study of that change. Historical but not necessarily chronological, this is an architectural survey concentrating on several themes and building types, urban development will be its primary focus. Students will study cities, towns, and individual buildings and building types, as well as the people responsible for their design, finance, construction, and habitation.

140B  California Landscape Tradition: European and American Antecedents
Homsy

Prerequisite: not open to freshmen.

This course focuses on the roots of modern ideas in landscape design and their theoretical bases. The central theme to be examined is the pioneer spirit in the Western garden tradition. California style and influences from Classical, Mediterranean and Islamic traditions will be explored in depth. In addition to this, European and American antecedents will be introduced and a series of themes of both architecture and landscape design will be emphasized. We will examine: English Landscape tradition, Dutch 'door gardens' in the New World, Colonial American style, and America's 'Golden Age'.

This course includes slide lectures, a reader, in-class discussions, and field trip.
Information: Bryn Homsy (805) 636-9366.
